

Description Library

Forty ready-to-use service descriptions. Copy them into your menu, booking app or website, and change a word or two so they sound like you.

HOW TO WRITE YOUR OWN

1. Lead with how the client will feel or look afterward, not with the machine or the acid.
2. Say who it's for ("for sensitive skin," "before an event").
3. Keep it to one or two sentences. Details belong in the consultation.
4. Name the time and the price clearly, so no one has to ask.

STAY ON THE COSMETIC SIDE

Estheticians improve how skin looks and feels; doctors treat disease. Words like cure, treat and heal can cross that line with your state board and with advertising rules.

SAY THIS	NOT THIS
clearer, calmer skin	cures acne
softens the look of fine lines	removes wrinkles
helps fade the look of dark spots	treats hyperpigmentation
soothes redness	heals rosacea
a lifted, sculpted look	a non-surgical facelift
supports your skin's barrier	repairs damaged skin

BUILD A MENU THAT SELLS

- Lead with your signature. Put the facial you want most people to book first.
- Offer three levels. An express, a signature and a premium option make the middle one feel easy to choose.
- Make add-ons effortless. A short list with small prices is the easiest upgrade to say yes to.
- Show time and price together. Clients compare by value per minute, whether they notice or not.
- End with the membership. Once someone sees the menu, a monthly plan is the obvious next step.
- Keep it short. Ten to fifteen services beats forty. Fewer choices, faster decisions.
